35 ROAD FATALITIES IN MAINE LAST MONTH

The month of November, 1940, has come to an end and 23 people were killed on our streets and highways during this month. The youngest person killed was 8 years old and the oldest was 72. Between these ages of 8 and 72, we have an age limit that holds very much to the ages between 20 and 50, which is not surprising as the majority of our motorists are included in this age limit. What does disturb us to a great extent is the fact that several of the pedestrian fatalities for this month are included in this same age group. Usually it is either the children, or people 60 years or over, that give us the most of our pedestrian trouble. We can account for the pedestrian fatalities to the youngest and the aged because the youngsters do not realize the danger and perhaps have not been as fortunate as some of our children in larger communities that have had the benefit of safety education in their schools. Our difficulty with the aged has always been the same old story—that they have a right to walk when and where they please and would not listen to our pleadings, trying to get them to walk safely, but when a person 40 or 45 years of age will not assume the responsibility that a pedestrian should, that is a situation that should never exist in any state and our records show that several of our pedestrian fatalities were citizens between the ages of 20 and 45 years of age. We are depending upon this age group to set the example and not only form safety habits themselves but to encourage and help to instruct other pedestrians the proper way to walk on our streets and highways.

In compiling our motor vehicle fatalities for eleven months of 1940, we show a decrease of 1.8% over 1939, but for the month of November, 1940, as compared to the month of November, 1939, we show an increase of 79%.

The counties of Knox and Waldo have lost their perfect records during the past month, they both having had two fatalities. Although Knox County still shows a decrease of 50%, Waldo County shows an increase of 100%. The county of Piscataquis still has a perfect record, having had no fatalities for this 11-month period. The two fatalities in Knox County were both pedestrians, one of them having been struck by a hit-and-run driver. The two fatalities in Waldo County involved one driver of a motor vehicle and the other a 12-year old boy on a bicycle. This youngster fell from his bicycle in front of a bus. From the report we find this accident happened after dark with poor street lights but the report does state the boy or not there were lights on this bicycle. If there were no lights on the bicycle for this boy's protection, it would seem that the parents of this boy were very neglectful. The report does not state the boy was dressed in dark clothing and very hard to see against the black surface of the road.

For the next few months we anticipate numerous sliding fatalities and some of these fatalities will be caused by children being allowed to slide out of their own dooryards onto a main highway. This type of accident could easily be overcome by sanding these driveways, making sliding impossible.

Let us remind our motorists once more that our highways are covered with snow and ice. These conditions will undoubtedly be with us for the next few months and it is their responsibility to govern the speed of their motor vehicles to the conditions of our highways.

TWO ESCAPE FROM CAR IN PLEASANT RIVER

A car containing Dominic Sinibaldi and Leo Micucci, amateur boxers of Cascade, N. H., skidded through the guard rail of the Pleasant River bridge and dropped 15 feet to the river Saturday. The car went through the thin ice and landed with its wheels on the river bed and the top of the car above water. The men succeeded in climbing to the top of the car and there awaited rescue. They were able to walk ashore after a 20 foot ladder was put out to them by Wilson Bartlett and Earlyn Crouse, truck drivers from Bethel.

They went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hale nearby where Micucci was treated by a doctor, six stitches being needed to close a cut on his left shoulder. Sinibaldi, operator of the machine, was unhurt.

The accident was investigated by State Officer John K. Maguire of Bethel.

C. OF C. ELECTED OFFICERS WINTER SPORTS DISCUSSED

At the meeting of the Bethel Chamber of Commerce Tuesday evening Stuart Martin of Rumford Point gave a most instructive talk on Benjamin Thompson or Court Rumford. During the business session which preceded Mr. Martin's address the questions of winter sports promotion and colored lights on Main street during the holiday season were discussed. R. L. Watson was appointed chairman of a committee to investigate local winter sports and ski-tow possibilities, and F. P. Flint volunteered to solicit the necessary financial support for the street lighting.

STATE HIGHWAY REVENUE UP $483,000,000 IN DECADE

The decade of the slumpy 30's might not have been so prosperous for the average American taxpayer, but these have been mighty finances for the state collectors of automotive taxes.

The flow of dollars from pockets of highway users to state treasuries has increased normally. In 1940 highway users will pay in special automotive taxes $483,000,000 more than what they paid in 1930 according to the Maine Petroleum Industries Committee. In 1930 these taxpayers paid $50,382,70 to the state in automotive taxes, a sum which broke all records at the time. In 1940 the nation's highway users will pay, the committee estimates, a total of $1,233,000,000 in state gasoline taxes and registration fees, an increase of $483,000,000 over the year 1930.

"This increase of nearly half a billion dollars in the annual state tax bill of the motorists during a decade when they were faced generally with lower incomes and difficulties in balancing personal and household budgets, certainly should receive careful attention of state legislation and taxing authorities," comments the committee. "Motorist taxes have grown far faster than other taxes. When tax reductions are possible, they should receive first consideration."

BETHEL--Gateway to Maine from White Mountains

(From New York Herald-Tribune, Sunday, August 15, 1937).
By PETER FANEUIL

Bethel might very aptly be termed the Gateway from the White Mountains when traveling from Gorham, N. H. It is one of the most picturesque towns in New England, as any one who has driven up Broad street on Bethel Hill in midsummer will testify. The Sunday and Bear rivers are the haunts of fishermen. Broad street takes one to Paradise Hill, so-called because of its long, hard climb, the view of miles of rich country from its top being a fit reward for those who persevere.

The new Evans Notch Highway stretches from Gilead, just west of Bethel, to North Chatham, Chatham and Slow, through virgin country that offers incomparable scenery. There is nothing more memorable than the Androscoggin River bordering Bethel, where millions of spools are made and shipped to thread and yarn mills all over the world.

Bethel is the home of Gould Academy and was the residence of the late Professor William Rogers Chapman, of Maine Music Festival note. The Chapman home is now occupied in the summer by Mrs. Chapman, and for years has been the mecca of composers and music lovers.

Originally Called Sudbury Canada

On August 26, 1874, Bethel celebrated its 100th anniversary of settlement, with Nathaniel T. True as chairman and Richard A. Frye as secretary of arrangements. Leading citizens headed committees of the festivities, which were "ushered in by a delightful day. Bells were rung at sunrise, and almost before the villagers had finished their breakfast carriages began to arrive loaded with men, women and children. Many of the private residences throughout the village were gayly trimmed with evergreens and other decorations. A large national flag floated across the street between Bethel House and the residence of Major Gleason A. Hastings. The procession began to form at 10 a. m. on Broad street, extending across the common and down Church street. On entering the grove through an arch inscribed "1774 Bethel 1874," there were arranged on the right tables to accommodate 4,000 people, and on the left seats and conveniences for many more."

On this occasion were present some children whose fathers and mothers had trekked through these woods on snowshoes to make their home in a wilderness. Reconstructing this scene, we learn that the Indian name of what is now Bethel has been lost, and that the spot where Timothy Chapman lived had once been an Indian village. Probably this had been abandoned about 1750 by these early arrivals on clearing this land about twenty cellars, which probably had been used as a cache for corn were discovered. A dozen or so gun barrels also came to light with brass kettles, axes, knives, glass bottles, arrows and iron hoes. These had served the white settlers for several years and so did the gun barrels, which were wrought into fire shovels by Ebenezer Blacksmith.

At the outset Bethel had been called Sudbury Canada, probably because several of its settlers came from Sudbury, Mass. to this place close to Canada. A meeting being held, it was decided that Joseph Twitchell and Isaac Fuller, a surveyor should survey the township and divide it into lots.

Twitchell, who was wealthy and the ancestor of all bearing this name hereabouts, owned the worth of three lands and when proprietors failed to pay the assessments he bought their claims until eventually he held forty shares. Though he never resided here himself, it was largely due to his energy and foresight that this early settlement was made. Among his purchases was the lot covering a large portion of what was later Bethel Hill and included, as well, all the mill privileges on Mill Brook.

At this time Sudbury Canada was covered with such dense pine forests that a hunter did not know the existence of a mountain until he was at its very base, and like a silver thread the Androscoggin wound through mountains and forests.

The outbreak of the Revolutionary War threw things into confusion. Not until 1783 did the General Court give full title to settlers for land rightfully theirs.

Axes and Sugar Kettles

The first white man who shouldered his axe here is said to have been Lieutenant Nathaniel Segar, who came from Newton, Mass., in 1774. But no sooner had he hewn down trees and built his cabin than he left for the war, "in which he was engaged for two years and nine months." He was back in Bethel in 1770, accompanied by Jonathan Bartlett and with kettles in which sugar was made and later sold to the Indians.

Lieutenant Jonathan Clark was another early arrival. He is said to have been the first white man to cut hay here. In the fall of 1776 Samuel Ingalls and his wife left Andover, Mass., to join the little Maine colony. Mrs. Ingalls, journeying partly on foot and partly on horseback, was the first white woman of the town, in consequence of which 100 acres of land were given to her. Other pioneers were Benjamin Russell and General Amos Hastings, both of Fryeburg. In 1770 Captain Eleazer Twitchell, son of Joseph Twitchell, original proprietor of the mills, arrived with his family to look after his father's property. With him was his wife, his wife's sister, Betsy Mason, five children and six servants.

In the spring of 1781, thirteen years after the plantation had been granted to the proprietors, there were but ten families in the town. This lack of growth was due largely to the Revolutionary War and to Indian uprisings. Yet despite these setbacks and the fresh in 1785, new colonists began to appear.

"The pioneers had no roads," the record reads. "Spotted trees served as guideboards. Marvelous strides were told by them relating to their crops of wheat, potatoes and corn in the rich soil of the intervals. Yet they had their luxuries. They employed their time in the spring months in making maple syrup and sugar. Hulled corn boiled in maple syrup is no mean fare. Sage tea took the place of tea and coffee. Fresh moose steak was good then as now."

When Neighbors Met

When calling at another's house one rarely knocked. The apple-paring bee, the husking, the raising and the quilting bee were industrious affairs mixed with hearty camaraderie. Every one convened in the kitchen. The long pole overhead served for clothes after they had been washed and ironed while in the autumn they were covered with dried pumpkins and strings of dried apple. The old musket which had served in the war hung to a beam overhead. The huge fireplace was regularly supplied with a great back-log, fore-stick and other wood every morning. The pile of ashes served for roasting potatoes and burying up the coals at night. If the fire went out during the night someone was had to the flint and steel tinder box, or a boy was dispatched to a neighbor's for a live coal. Seats were improvised, and the neighbors assembled in the kitchen for a lecture from the clergyman.

Visiting in the evening was popular, and when a caller came a bowl of apples and a mug of cider was always in evidence. A bountiful supper in which doughnuts and native pie played an important part was followed by stories and witticisms or by reminiscences of the war or some knotty doctrinal subject in theology.

"Everybody could use snowshoes. Holes dug in the ground served as a place of deposit for their potatoes, their corn. Among all the inconveniences incident to pioneer life only one seems to have been insurmountable. A man by the name of Newland had a fine pig which he placed in a large hollow pine stump for his sty. The pig grew rapidly and so large that he could not be taken out without spoiling the stump."

The plantation grew, and in 1796, after petitioning the Massachusetts Legislature, it incorporated as a town. The name Bethel was suggested by the Rev. Eliphaz Chapman.

In primitive days flax was spun and woven into cloth from which handkerchiefs, checked aprons and gowns were fashioned, "while for Sunday shirts nothing better was expected....The wool from sheep was manufactured into blankets, woolen shirts and such....while one web went to the fulling mill, out of which go-to-meeting clothes were made."

The pioneers did not suffer from the cold. Every farmer carried his calves and sowskins to the tanner, who changed them into leather, and often he spent the fall and winter evenings making boots and shoes for his family. The well-to-do citizen wore a buff vest adorned with brass buttons, while a ruff shirt appeared prominently. A watch chain with a carnation seal hung from his trousers. Underclothing was unknown.

"For the older men a red bandanna pocket handkerchief served a good purpose, and a muffler for the neck in cold weather, while the young men had a gay-colored silk handkerchief, one end of which, a quarter of a yard in length, was sure to hang from the coat pocket. No young man in those days was considered well dressed without this appendage.

Short Skirts Worn

The ladies wore their dresses with a short waist and a short skirt, exhibiting a well turned ankle and foot, which was covered with a shoe having a black silk bow or buckle on the top. A Vandike collar surrounded the neck and the married ladies had a cap containing many yards of ruffle. No doubt they appeared handsome and attractive, especially when a neat row of curls bordered a comely face."

Among Bethel's lost industries was the manufacture of potash and the making of shaved shingles. This latter industry flourished before the pine timber disappeared and gave winter employment to many.

Dr. Moses Mason, who had little education but a goodly quota of wit, was one of Bethel's most popular citizens. When he was a candidate for Congress he wrote a letter to his opponent "in which the spelling and grammar were not exactly in accordance with the established usage." This opponent, hoping to gain a point, had the letter published verbatim, but the result was not what he had expected. It was regarded as such a breach of confidence that the candidate gave the doctor hundreds of votes and he was triumphantly elected and was also re-elected.

Edmund Bean, commonly known as "Mr. Ned," was another who, though uneducated, was a good farmer and he knew how to make money. One year he bought a large number of turkeys which he drove to Portland. When "Mr. Ned" finally reached Portland the market already was well stocked. "He was advised to inquire of the condition of the Boston market by telegraph....Presenting himself to the operator and making his wants known he was invited to take a seat and await the results. The operator then wired to Boston, had a messenger dispatched to Faneuil Hall market, and in a brief time the prices current of turkeys was placed in Mr. Bean's hands with a demand for $1.50. The old man asked them to read the dispatch, which they did, and then he flew into passion, declaring them cheats and frauds. 'Why,' said he, 'I've had my eye on you all the time, you haven't been to Boston; you haven't been out of this office, nor your darn old tick-box either!'" After a full explanation "Mr. Ned" paid the bill and departed a wiser man.

The black bear was a great pest to early settlers, destroying their corn when it was in the milk and terrorizing their sheep. "Eleazer Twitchell once placed a tub containing new rum and molasses in his corn field, and going out in the morning, found Bruin drunk. On waking up the bear found himself securely chained and was easily dispatched. The same method has been practiced in other towns with similar results...."

The years have treated Bethel kindly. It is still richly mountainous, typically New England. Some of the old customs survive with ancient landmarks. The Bethel Inn, where Mr. S. N. Blackwood presides, is the largest hostelry, but the tourist is also cared for at Maple Inn, Bethaven Inn and Ladd's Wayside Inn.

of wallpaper. We want to put on plaster with a hard, smooth finish.

wallpaper must be removed, which can be done by soaking it with water.
Be careful in doing the job, so that in taking off the wallpaper you do not also take off the paper that is part of the plasterboard. With the paper off, you can apply wall plaster, of the ordinary kind; but I should prefer plastic paint of a kind that is made with gypsum. This contains an adhesive that will make a good bond with your plasterboard.
It can be applied with a broad brush and smoothed down with a trowel or a plasterer's float.

Damp Cellar.
Question: In an old farmhouse that we recently purchased, the cellar is very damp, even though it is cemented. The stone walls sweat, and in wet weather water comes in at the side. Can we do anything ourselves at no great expense to make the cellar dry?

Answer: You can check or even stop the leakage through the walls
by repointing the inside stonework.
Using a cold chisel and a hammer, dig out the mortar to a depth of an inch or more, and replace it with a mortar made of 1 part portland cement, 1/2 part of hydrated lime, 3 parts of clean building sand, and only enough water to make a workable mixture. Wet the joints with water, and pack them tightly with this mortar. If your rainwater leaders discharge into the ground 10 feet or less from the house, change their positions so that the discharge will be at least 15 feet away. For condensation, run a low fire in your heating plant for a day or two; air
the cellar only on dry and hot days, keeping it closed on days that are humid and at night.

Damp Odor.
Question: Last year's rains brought a strong, damp odor in our basement, and much mold appeared. With two rains in June the smell reappeared. How can the cellar walls be waterproofed?

Answer: The moldy odor indicates rotting wood, or other vegetable or animal material. To get rid of the odor you must locate and get rid of the cause. If the dampness is from condensation on the cellar walls, which is likely, no coating on the walls will prevent it. You must line the walls with something that will keep the warm and damp air from being chilled by the cool masonry.

Rusty Refrigerator.
Question: In my refrigerator the unit burned out, and the easy-gas corroded the wire cables and the metal in the ice cube compartment. These parts are all very rusty. How can I remove the rust?
Answer: All of these metal parts were originally plated or coated with some metal intended to prevent rusting; possibly zinc. Rusting shows that this preventive coating has disappeared. Cleaning off the rust will be only temporary. You should either get new parts, or send the rusty parts to a plating shop to be cleaned and plated with chromium.
A garage can give you the name of a nearby plating shop.

Stud Spaces
Question: In my house spaces between the studs are open to the cellar, and run all the way to the attic. The house is 15 years old, and the builder tells me that these spaces in modern construction should now be closed. Is there any advantage in this?
Answer: With these spaces open to cellar and attic, there is a continual draft through them. In winter this draft tends to chill the house, and at times would suck a cellar fire into the walls. There is every advantage in closing these spaces.

WEEKLY SERIAL INSTALLMENT

By FREDERIC F. VAN DE WATER

SYNOPSIS

David Mallory, in search of newspaper work in New York, is forced to accept a job as switch-board operator in a swank apartment house, managed by officious Timothy Higgins. There David meets Miss Agatha Paget, a crippled old lady, and her charming niece, Allegra. One day, talking with Higgins in the lobby, David is alarmed by a piercing scream. David finds the scream came from the Ferriter apartment, not far from the Pagets. The Ferriters include Lyon and Everett, a genialist, is helping Agatha Paget write a book about her blue-blooded ancestors. Inside the apartment they find a black-bearded man—dead. No weapon can be found. The police arrive. Higgins, who actively dislikes David, informs him that he is fired.

CHAPTER III—Continued

"You two-timing toment," I told Higgins. "Go ahead and kick me out and we'll see who lands in the gutter first. Now get this, I never knew where you'd been this afternoon till I came down here. Now that I'm wise that leaves just one in the house who isn't—Mrs. Higgins!"

"Will you be still?" he asked in a hushed voice, and I knew from his eyes he was going to hit me.

"Go ahead," I invited. "There's plenty of reporters outside. It'll make a good story. The tabloids will have pictures, too. One of you in Wilson's uniform, maybe."

I waited. He stood still and at last opened his mouth.

I never found out what he was going to say for Fineman, at the switchboard, called:

"Hey, Mallory. You're wanted up in Three A right away."

"Don't bother to pack for me," I told Higgins. "I'll do it myself when I come down."

Boone, on the elevator, kept glancing at me as he took me up. Maybe I looked as sick as I felt. Anger is worse than liquor on an empty stomach.

They had closed the door of the Ferriter flat but there still was movement inside. I rang the Paget bell. The girl in uniform I'd seen in the hall while Miss Ferriter was screaming let me in. She led me down the hall and stood aside at an open door. I started to enter but she beckoned and I followed her. I could only stand in the doorway and stare without belief.

CHAPTER IV

Miss Agatha Paget had a red ten on a three jack. A tall glass stood beside the card on her table. A cigarette dangled from her lips. She kept it on her lips as she spoke, and the cigarette was at the tip of her black hair.

She should have been sitting in a chair, but she was too excited. The drink, the cards and the cigarette seemed as out of place as a cupid in church. She blew a cloud from her mouth, ground out the cigarette on a tray, and nodded toward a chair.

"Come in, David," she said. "Sit down."

I obeyed. She held a card above the layout, placed it and then looked square at me.

"If that is on air I offered plenty," she told me. "I can get along without it. When you're my age, David, you'll take to the small vices remaining, as compensation for others you've missed. Have a drink!"

She looked toward a cello in the corner. I shook my head. Her sharply angled, eager face made me wonder whether the vitality denied her crippled legs had not flowed upward, to invigorate the rest of her. She took a last pull at her glass and wiped her lips on a lace handkerchief.

"Grove," she began, "tells me you've been discharged."

I didn't know Grove but I said: "I have. I'm supposed to have bared the amours of the basement Casanova."

She gave her husky chuckle.

"It was I who bared them. Only a remarkable man could be wrong as often as Timothy."

She tinkled the ice in her glass, slipped it again and then looked straight at me.

"What are you going to do?"

"When you sent for me," I said, "I was just going to take a poke at Higgins."

The wrinkles about her eyes deepened.

"You quote Kenneth Grahame; you want to punch Timothy. What other recommendations have you?"

I did not understand. She prompted.

"You've been a reporter. What else can you do?"

I could not see where all this led, but I answered:

"I'm a fair blocking halfback and a good fencer. I also ride, swim and know a couple of card tricks."

"College, eh?"

I wondered if this was her idea of amusing herself.

"B. A.," I told her. "The diploma is in Omaha. I also had a Phi Beta key but I haven't now—there are rules against hoarding gold, you see. I can ransom my dress clothes though, if you feel you need a butler. They're in the trunk my former landlady is keeping for me. She insisted on it."

I had begun to feel like a laboratory specimen under her regard. It bothered me. When Miss Paget asked: "Would you care to work for me?" I shook my head.

"Kind of you," I told her, "but I think not. I've got relatives in Nebraska if I want charity."

I think that surprised her. She lit another cigarette.

"My boy," she said through a smoke cloud, "I'm beginning to understand why Higgins doesn't like you. It isn't charity. People I help have to work for what they get. Is that clear?"

It wasn't, but I nodded. She went on:

"I'm working, with Mr. Ferriter, on a genealogy of the Paget family. You've heard of the Pagets."

"Sorry," I said and hoped my denial would tick her. Instead she grinned and for an instant it seemed time had worn her old face so thin that a valiant spirit shone through the mask.

"Weren't you lucky," said Miss Agatha, "to have been raised in Nebraska? If you'll stop being suspicious, I've something to tell to you."

She finished her drink. Her eyes were bright and mocking.

"Paget, David, isn't just a family name. It's a religion—a very exclusive, comfortable religion. The only reason there wasn't a Paget on the Mayflower is that the ship had no royal suite. There aren't any D. A. R.'s or Sons of the Revolution among the Pagets. You see, the patriots were rather a mixed lot. I was raised in the fear of Paget and I'm doing a book about my forebears by way of reprisal. I need a man, preferably one who never heard of the Pagets, who can take what the heliotrope Mr. Ferriter digs up and write it. He can't—or he's afraid to."

"A genealogy is just a catalogue," I told her. "You won't need a writer."

"Wrong all the way," she told me briskly. "That's just what I do need. There's never been a genealogy like this one. I'm prying the highly polished veneer off Paget; I'm going to tell the story of a family that's full of cowards and scoundrels and hypocrites and cheats and sluggards—like your family, like all families. I'm going to give as much space to my ancestors' frailties as to their virtues. It'll be a big book."

Again she gave that robust chuckle. I asked, defensively, for I felt her sweeping me along:

"Who'll dare to publish it?"

"I will," she said, and her teeth bit through an invisible thread. "One copy for each of the Pagets. Most of them are too far gone for the truth to reach them, but I want my children to know all about Paget before they're much older. They aren't really my children, though I raised them. My brother and sister-in-law died when Grosvenor was thirteen and Allegra ten."

"Grove is working in a bond house for all he's worth—which is about half of what he gets. Allegra is too pretty to have brains, yet she has them. I want my book to keep them from going Paget. Every family should have a factual account of its ancestors, their weaknesses and foibles and misdemeanors and felonies. The Pagets will be the first to get it. I don't want my youngsters to get the family delusion that just being a Paget is all that should be expected of anyone."

"A muck-raking genealogy," I said, hoping I'd plague her. Agatha nodded.

"If more of it was raked, every generation, there'd be less muck. I'll give you—"

She stopped and looked toward the door. The maid said, "Captain Shannon, m'am."

He held his hat and wore his overcoat. I saw his eyebrows go up a little as he looked at me but there was no surprise in his voice when he spoke to Miss Agatha.

"Thank you for your help, Miss Paget. I'm leaving." He looked from the fragile old lady to the cards and the emptied glass and grinned. "You're swell," he said.

Miss Agatha beamed.

"I won't argue it with you," she told him. "Anything new?"

"Everett Ferriter came in," Shannon reported briefly. "I've been talking to him across the way. I tried to get an identification out of him."

"And what did he do?" Miss Agatha asked.

"He wrung his hands," said Shannon. "He'd never seen Blackbeard. Hadn't any idea who it was. He's over there now if you want to see him."

"I do not," said Miss Agatha. "My niece gave him an alibi. That's enough. And he can't bother his sister tonight, either. We've dosed her with sedatives and she's asleep. What about Lyon?"

Shannon's eyelids puckered and a sullen sound came into his voice.

"We're looking for him," he said. "Small chance of his getting clear. Every cop in town has his description by now. It's only a matter of time before we pick him up."

"And the knife?" the old lady asked.

He scowled. "No sign of it," he confessed. "We've tossed the whole place and it's not there."

Feet came heavily along the hall. The maid appeared at the doorway and started to speak but two men stood behind her and one of them, the detective Jake, said proudly to Shannon:

"Here's the guy, Cap."

Miss Agatha was the first to find her voice and in it was no hint of surprise.

"Come in," she invited. "Captain Shannon, this is my neighbor, Mr. Lyon Ferriter."

She turned to me, hesitated and then her eyelids puckered.

"I don't know," she told the gaunt figure in the doorway, "whether you have met Mr. Mallory formally before. Do come in."

Ferriter was still the lank, brown figure in worn tweeds that I had seen striding through the foyer and I felt again, as he stood in the door and stared, the odd charm of his leathery person. His black hair was stippled with gray like a silver fox pelt and if he were alarmed, he hid it well. He bowed to the old lady and said in a pleasant, faintly English voice:

"Good evening, Miss Paget. I'm sorry to intrude but—"

He shifted his attention to Shannon and his tone was less agreeable.

"I understand, Captain, that I must get your permission to enter my own apartment."

"Who brought you in?" Shannon snapped.

Ferriter nodded to his cigar-chewing companion.

"This—gentleman," he replied with a slurring gap between the words. The Captain beamed on Jake.

"You're not so dumb at that," he told his underling. "Where did you find him?"

Jake said, "I didn't. He walked right in on us, next door."

Miss Agatha seemed amused but Shannon was not. He found the under-ling companion.

"That's a good deal of a walk, isn't it?" Shannon purred.

"That's what I wanted," Lyon answered.

"And you spent the whole day without talking to anyone?" the Captain asked.

"I said," Lyon reminded him, "that I had no alibi. I had the solitude you can get only in New York, or beyond the Arctic Circle. No," he exclaimed suddenly, "that isn't quite right. I helped a lady fix her car."

"When?"

"Sometime in the afternoon. I really don't know. She had ignition trouble—I mean her car had. I fixed it for her."

He spread his hands and showed his still soiled palms.

"The grease sticks," he pursued. "She was driving a last year's Ford sedan, New York license. I don't recall the number. She was stalled near where Moshulu Parkway swings over into the Bronx River Parkway. I didn't ask her name. You see, she was not exactly beauty in distress. An elderly person—but not at all like Miss Paget."

Miss Agatha caught my eye and winked shamelessly. Then she resumed her careful regard of Lyon.

"And then?" Shannon prodded.

"I walked south to the 180th Street subway station. It was dusk when I reached it. I got off at Grand Central, rubbed off some of the grime in the washroom, had supper at Mino's, 22 East Fifty-second and came on home."

Shannon scowled and bit his lip.

"Ever," the Captain lunged, "know a man with a black beard?"

Lyon smiled.

"I've spent a winter in Alaska," he said. "I've known beards of all colors."

"About your size," Shannon said, glaring, "carried a knife under his left armpit."

"Wouldn't it be better," Ferriter asked, "if you let me see him?"

He bowed to Miss Paget and, with Jake trailing close behind and Shannon glowering in the rear, led the way from the room. Their footsteps went down the hall. The door opened and closed. The old lady folded her hands on her lap and looked at me.

"Well?" she asked. I found challenge in her voice.

"Well?" I answered.

"We seem to agree," she jeered. I did not understand her and after waiting a moment, she went on briskly:

"When we were interrupted, I was about to offer you the job of writing the Paget book for me. Would fifty dollars a week be satisfactory?"

I needed it badly, yet I found the offer hard to take. Its charitable flavor gagged me. I said "No" and she looked at me hard.

"You'll work for it," she assured me. "Don't think you won't. Or if fifty really isn't enough, sixty then."

"Miss Paget—" I began and then stopped and stood up.

Allegra and Grosvenor Paget came in. They were like creatures from a world that knew no poverty or sorrow. He was smoothly handsome in evening clothes with little, I thought, between his blond face and his shining hair. His sister had the spark he lacked.

They had breeding, or else long acquaintance with the whims of their aunt, for they spoke to me as easily as though ballroom were usually to be found in Miss Agatha's room, and then addressed the old lady with irreverent hilarity, both talking at once. They were off to the Groesbeck ball. Bertha would listen for Jones, in case she roused but the doctor had said she would not. They did not know when they would be in.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1940

Bethel has one great need which,
like Mark Twain's weather, is frequently a subject of conversation but nothing is done about it. The Citizen ventures on the subject with due caution, because it is one subject that is supposed to be within the province of a country newspaper but which that newspaper can do little or nothing about without the aid of every person within the limits of its coverage.

That need is better stores.
The solution rests with the people.

It is not to be expected that if the best stores in the world were located here they would receive 100 per cent patronage. Even then the greener pasture would be on the other side of the fence for some of us.

But the trend is now definitely toward the town becoming a greater center than it has been for a long time, perhaps more than it ever was. Its location on improved roads, leading in from four directions, make it a vacation and tourist center. The reopening of a hotel, construction of a theatre and bowling alley, indicate the faith that some people have in business here.

With convenience for travelers, facilities for ample amusement and recreation developed, trade opportunities will expand in all probability. It will then be up to us to show due appreciation of such initiative.
Even now there could be much better business if the merchants and their customers so valued it.
The advertising columns of the Citizen seldom reflect the services offered by its stores, but the success of the local newspaper, local merchants, and every person living in town depends on consistent home town loyalty.

Merchandising is such today that in many cases the apparent savings of a few cents ago do not exist in the mail order catalog or flashy advertisement of a distant city. Many older towns have been standardized fair and uniform prices make it possible to obtain good merchandise and good values in any good store.

Improvement is up to everybody.
The business man who sends a few dollars away, suggesting that a fellow merchant might make a few cents on a sale, is as much or more to blame than a smaller customer many times rebuffed in a futile search for a needed article who at last is forced to begin the mail order hunt.

With the 12 inches of snow we had before, and the 18 inches that has fallen during the past 24

seems good for a sufficient amount for sleighing at least, by Christmas.

THE LOW DOWN

FROM

HICKORY GROVE

Down at Tolono on the Wabash, they used to claim that it took 2
men to see the Cannon Ball Express go through One duck would say, "here she comes," and the other gent would say, "there she goes." And I am thinking about the old Wabash story on account of the election we are just getting over.

There hasn't been enough watchers. Things have been whirling behind that we could hardly see. The air has been full of democrats and progressives and too few people with pump-guns.

But with the counting about complete and we come up almost even-steven on republicans vs.
democrats, we are gonna get a little better glimpse of what is going on. But if it takes 2 republicans to watch one democrat, like on the Wabash, we are not yet out of the woods. But we are making progress.

WINTER DRIVING TIPS
FOR SAFER DRIVING

To paraphrase an old maxim,
"Now is the time for all good drivers to come to the aid of their fellow motorists." For with winter's approach, every driver would do well to review his car-handling technique in view of the rigorous conditions which the snow-and-ice season imposes.

Ed Hedner, national director of service for Chevrolet, has compiled a list of winter tips which every motorist should review as the days grow shorter and road hazards increase. Prime among them—and a "first principle" on the winter highways—is "slow down." A winter-time investment in safety is the decrease of your normal driving speed by at least one-third.
If you are accustomed to traveling 30 miles per hour between home and office, slow down to 20 or 25 miles, and reap your harvest in undented fenders.

Hand in hand with this advice
is the admonition to keep a safe distance between your car and the one ahead, a self-evident rule with good drivers, but one that becomes doubly important when streets and highways are glazed with ice and covered with a deceptively light snowfall.

Another sound bit of advice
which Hedner offers to the city motorist in particular, is a word of caution with reference to car tracks. When you get your wheels caught in car tracks or icy ruts, never attempt to get them put without decreasing your speed.
Skids are often a result of "whipping," the car out of ruts at a speed that virtually invites skidding.

When approaching traffic lights in winter time, assume that the light will probably turn against you, not that you can "slide through" if your luck holds. Ease up to the intersection carefully avoiding any sudden application of brakes, for here again a special winter driving technique comes into play. In braking your car on a slippery street, "pump" your brakes slowly and easily and you will find that traction can be retained. Do not release your clutch until you are practically stopped. Thus, brakes and motor both can be made to help slow you down.

Most winter driving accidents,
experience show, occur in the center lanes of traffic. Obviously, you can boost your "safety potential" by avoiding center lanes in favor of the curb lane.

Proper use of skid chains may mean the difference between safety and danger. But they cannot take the place of proper caution.
Remember that chains do not enable you to travel safely at increased speed. They sometimes act as skates on slippery streets. Apply brakes slowly when using chains, and keep in mind that the purpose of chains is to improve traction.
They are not a substitute for safe driving.

Most drivers know the proper procedure to straighten out the car when it goes into a skid. By way of review: when the rear end skids, turn your front wheels in the direction in which the rear end is skidding. Don't "fight" the skid; ease out of it gradually.

This winter, shift your best tires to your back wheels, for, contrary to general belief, a blowout in a back tire is far more serious than one in front. And don't entrust your safety to smooth tires.

Caution in the handling of your own car and courtesy toward your fellow drivers sums up winter driving technique.

SO-SHOP EARLY!

There was a young lady "Miss Slow"

Who just had no get-up-and-go; To all signs she said, "Pooh! As I please, so I do."

Her sad fate, you will presently know.

Christmas Eve she awoke with a start; To the stores she flew like a dart. She ignored a red light—What a horrible sight!

Now she shops in a heavenly mart. Oh, heed well this tale of much woe; Don't start when the red light says, "NO."

If you Christmas shop early, Sales folks won't be surly, And you'll live to a hundred or so. —National Conservation Bureau.

4-H CLUBS PREPARED TO DO THEIR PART

Boys and Girls who are members of Maine 4-H Clubs are well prepared to carry their share of America's defense program, according to Kenneth C. Lovejoy, State Club leader.

As evidence, he points to the record of work accomplished by these young people during the past year as a part of their regular 4-H Club program.

Maine 4-H Club members produced more than $135,412 worth of field and garden crops, poultry, pork, dairy products, beef, canning, clothing, and other essential commodities.

Not included in this total is the food project, so vital to building national strength through better health. More than 2000 boys and girls were at work all year in that project.

These young people raised 27 acres of field crops and gardens and raised 28,375 birds in the poultry project. A total of 527 dairy animals, 619 pigs, and 39 baby beefs were raised or cared for during the year.

Some idea of how these 4-H Club activities helped out around the farm home is given by the record of 220,871 meals prepared by club members, and 56,907 pints of canned goods put on the shelves because of their work.

In sewing, the girls made 196 dresses and 14,811 other articles. Boys and girls in the room improvement project renovated 357 rooms and made or refinished 139 articles to be used in those rooms.

The "Secret Weapon" of the U. S. A.

It isn't poison gas or a new and deadlier kind of explosive. It isn't even that coveted bomb sight we hear so much about these days which is known to us alone. Nevertheless, we do have a "secret weapon" which gives us great prestige among the informed leaders of other nations and would make us a formidable enemy to any foe. And unlike the so-called "secret weapons" of which other peoples boast it is of use to us in peace time as well as in periods when we build for national defense.

What is this unseen weapon of ours, not found in arsenals or military camps, that gives us an advantage over any possible enemy? What is it that makes us certain of our ability to face any emergency, unafraid? It is our native genius for invention now put to work on problems of defense in the efficient laboratories of all our great industries.

All but a few of the great inventions used in modern warfare have come from the United States. The submarine, the airplane, the tubes that make radio possible, were developed in American laboratories. And when a national emergency arises the inventive genius of our people, as well as the productivity of our industry and the power of our Army and Navy to meet it. In 1919, at the close of the world war, which had caused such concentrated effort, there was an increase over 1918 of 34% in the number of applications for patents and a flood of new products and techniques appeared that gave us a new standard of living.

There is every reason to believe that, as Industry buckles down to the work of producing defense adequate for 1940, a similar thing will happen and that products and methods undreamed of now will be everyday matters in a year or two.

Already since the first signs of danger appeared on our horizon, the octane rating of the gasoline of the United States has been stepped up from 80 to 100 and a still more powerful fuel is in sight. Airplanes have been made faster, surer, safer. Substitutes for rubber have been perfected so that the time is near when we shall probably be independent of the rubber plantations of foreign lands. We've found how to conserve tin by putting up various foods in transparent plastic bags and other plastics are being put to use in a variety of ways important to defense.

It is too soon to say what the greatest need of this country will be in the critical moments ahead. But no matter what it may be—whether for basic material or for improvement in the equipment of our defense forces—we know that with our "secret weapon" we shall meet it triumphantly.

An Oilcloth Burro For a Cuddle Toy

Pattern No. Z9033.

SLEEPY, an oilcloth burro, is as lazy as he can be. He just nods and sleeps all day, and seems not to care what the children do with him. But he has three redeeming recommendations: a cute personality, ease of making, and his ability to part from fingerprints with the whisk of a damp cloth.

Z9033, 15c, brings outlines and directions for this 12-inch burro with the green rana mane and red halter. Send order to:

There's a Good Reason You're Constipated!

When there's something wrong with you, the first rule is: get at the cause. If you are constipated, don't endure it first and "cure" it afterward. Find out what's giving you the trouble.

Chances are it's simple if you eat the super-refined foods most people do: meat, white bread, potatoes. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If this is your trouble, you should eat a natural "bulk" producing food—such as one as the crunchy, toasted, roasty-to-eat cereal, Kellogg's All-Bran. Eat it often, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Wallace, Capitol Spanish Club, Improve Pan-American Relations

Work to Remove Language Barrier Between Countries;
Continued Aid to England May Soon Require Large U. S. War Loans.

By BAUKHAGE

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
WASHINGTON.—It was midday in the Department of Agriculture building.

The goldfish in the marble basin in the patio were wiggling hopeful tails in the prospect of a few crumbs that might be dropped by clerks hurrying back to their desks from the cafeteria. At a table in a little luncheon room upstairs a man with touselled hair, a somewhat self-conscious smile on his face, pulled some

HENRY A. WALLACE

manuscript from his pocket and began to read:

"Me es sumamente grato y honroso . . ."

It was not a visiting Spanish dignitary saying in his native tongue, "It is indeed a great honor to be asked to make introductory remarks on the occasion of this distinguished gathering." It was the then secretary of agriculture, Henry Wallace, rehearsing before his fellow executives, the speech in Spanish that he was to deliver before the Pan American Scientific congress last May. And he knew what he was saying and so did his audience.

That informal Spanish club was only a little over two years old then but it is symbolic of a movement which has had a powerful influence in Washington—a movement the result of which is considered in Latin America as one of the real, practical steps toward Western hemisphere solidarity.

The story of that luncheon group and the man who started it is one of the fascinating stories of American diplomacy that doesn't get into the text books. It is largely the story of Secretary Wallace himself and the story of a side of him that few people know.

Except for the scholarly interest which a man who is an inveterate reader might have, Henry Wallace knew little more about South America than you or I when he came to Washington. Today his name is one of the best known of all of our officials to the Latin American newspaper reader. And they know it as the name of a man who understands them and their problems as few North Americans do.

Wallace Symbolized Friendship With Mexico

When Vice President-elect Wallace shook hands with the President-elect of Mexico before the recent inauguration in Mexico City, he did so as a person who was far more than the mere official representative of the President of the United States—he came as a symbol of practical friendship between this country and the republics to the south.

To grasp the reasons back of this achievement you have to watch Henry Wallace at work.

Wallace wasn't satisfied to read about South America, he wanted to read what South Americans said in their own tongue; he wasn't satisfied with talking about South Americans, he had to talk to them. So he learned the language and immediately the bars went down. For language is a barrier. That is typical of his methods.

Out of those luncheon meetings grew a Department of Agriculture Committee on Latin America. Armed with the data furnished by this committee and supported by his own array of factual information, Mr. Wallace went to Undersecretary Welles in the state department and to the President. The result was the formation of the Interdepartmental Committee on Co-operation With the American Republics, which studied the financial needs for activity in cultivating relations with South America.

Now money makes the mare go and this interdepartmental committee's efforts helped secure the appropriation which put the teeth into the secretary's own practical efforts. Last July he saw one practical achievement of a step which he had been fighting for for years. It will make possible actual experimentation in the development of rubber in South America which may some day make us independent of the foreign rubber markets and bolster one of the greatest defense needs.

Valuable Products Grown In Latin America

There are many other similar fields in which his efforts are bearing fruit. The department of agriculture, through study, through experimentation, through co-operation of representatives of the department attached to our diplomatic missions in Colombia and Argentina and our traveling representatives in South America, has made valuable studies which will aid the production of products the United States needs from South America which we can't raise here.

Here are some of them: First, rubber, which I mentioned; second, hemp; third, insecticidal roots (rotenone) so valuable to farmers who grow products like vegetables, for while this poison kills the bugs it is non-poisonous to man. Then there are the various hard woods we can't grow in our latitudes. A soil book, the result of Puerto Rican experiments, printed in Spanish has proved a gold mine to the folks of the Caribbean.

That rotenone is a story in itself. The secretary had read about how certain South American natives used these roots to kill fish. He followed it up. Had the department investigate it. Found how it could be processed in South America. Today seven million pounds are imported into the United States and when you realize that for use the solution is diluted five to one, you can see what a quantity our market can absorb.

Britain's Resources Dwindling Rapidly

Washington is beginning to feel the weight of pressure groups which are demanding short cuts in our efforts to aid Britain.

There are a number of committees like the one headed by William Allen White to defend America by aiding the allies—formed when France was still an ally—which keep hammering on the White House door. They have various specific aims but the general purpose is help for Great Britain, with which most people agree heartily in principle.

The administration has taken no official recognition of these various propaganda movements. Of some it approves. Of others it disapproves. But it is becoming clear that some leaders in congress will not oppose certain specific demands when they become more pressing.

One is an amendment to the Johnson act which prohibits loans to foreign nations which haven't paid their war debts. There is no official confirmation of this step but it is taken for granted by those who are supposed to know, that administration support will not be lacking if and when such an amendment is proposed as it probably will be by the time the new congress has settled down early in the new year.

Earlier it was said that Britain had enough gold and securities in this country to cover her purchase of war supplies here for some time but latest figures indicate that she has placed orders for four and a half billion dollars worth of supplies already. This leaves only a billion and a half in credits, according to the estimates of experts, and it is believed that will soon be exhausted at the present rate of purchasing in this country.

BACK DOOR: War in Reverse

Events on the Albanian and nearby fronts gave military experts what they considered proof that the grand British plan of conducting the war from now on will be to knock out Italy first, then turn attention to Germany.

Hence Europe was treated to a war in reverse. Although England was continuing bombing raids against military objectives on German and occupied European bases including Norway, chief attention was focused on Italy, both on the continent and in Africa.

To full reports on the Taranto affair were added the fall of Koritza, accomplished with British air aid, and further Greek successes were accompanied by word that British territorial forces were fighting side by side with Greeks in the snowy and mountainous terrain of the Albanian frontier.

Mussolini, after denying all British and Greek claims of victory, two days later was the first to announce to the world the fall of Koritza and that a major defeat had met Italian arms.

Gen. John Metaxas, handsome Greek leader, was hailed as the savior of the nation from the Italian menace, and the numbers of prisoners taken were succinctly summed up as "too many to handle."

MONKEY WRENCH: In Diplomacy?

Germany's diplomatic maneuvers, usually believed forerunner to huge military operations, continued to be watched closely in half a dozen capitals, and wonder was expressed

RUSSIA'S STALIN
Monkey wrench thrower.

again whether perhaps Soviet Russia might throw a monkey wrench into the grand design.

Balkan resistance to Axis domination has been a constant theme, with Hungary first to give in to Nazi demands, and Rumania following that example, though it was pointed out that the latter was already in Nazi hands.

At the moment, Russia stepped in with two moves, the significant character of which was evident, but the meaning of which was not at all clear.

Herein recalled the Moscow, Moscow's ambassador to the Reich, and replaced him with another ambassador.

Russia sent a warning to her little slaves to give up, Bulgaria, to be slow and careful about joining fully in the Axis plans.

Toss tossed a hot demand to Italy, that Russia had had one hand in Hungary's joining the Axis.

These three moves were projected on the diplomatic screen for what they were worth, speculators wondering mostly about the "monkey wrench" angle. Dictator Josef Stalin has a record of throwing "monkey wrenches" into international affairs. They can't forget the famous "treaty of Tilsit" in the Napoleonic war, and many are still betting that in the last analysis Russia will prove the turning point in the upset of the Axis hopes—if they are to be upset.

TURKEY: Again to Fore

Declaration of martial law by Turkey throughout all the European part of her nation brought her again to the fore as a major factor in developments on the southeastern front of the world war.

The Turks expressed their own attitude as follows:

"If the Germans are to aid Italy against Greece, Russia will not be willing to sit idle."

"However, even if Russia gives her consent, Turkey will defend herself."

"Bulgaria must be kept aloof from this newest move."

So Turkey, joining Russia in the warning to Bulgaria, evidenced that she was on the threshold of entrance into the war on the anti-Axis side.

The counter diplomatic move was coming from Von Papen, who was believed ready to offer Turkey a huge slice of France's Syrian territory if she would agree to remain aloof while the Germans go down through the Balkans and knock out Greece.

S.S.S.: Stress, Strikes, Sabotage

The defense front in the United States moved into the second of the phases that always have confronted this nation in times of industrial stress.

After a series of incidents that were widely interpreted as sabotage, strikes broke out in key industries in widely separated sections of the country.

Leading squabbles involved the Aluminum Company of America, a plant employing 7,500 workers, and the Vultee Aircraft corporation at work on government orders totaling $84,000,000.

Strike fever spread to Baltimore, where 2,000 city workers went out, demanding more money and pay for overtime, most serious public employees' strike in city's history.

The Aluminum strike was over company's refusal to discharge one employee who owed $12 back C. I. O. union dues.

The Vultee shutdown, also a C. I. O. matter, was blamed by U. S. Attorney General Jackson on "Reds." Workers were demanding raises of 50 to 75 cents an hour in pay.

Back of these scenes of labor stress stood the Dies committee, probing and publishing, charging the Nazis with responsibility for much and the Soviet agents with the rest of it all.

Jackson whipped back at Dies, stating he felt that the Dies group was accomplishing nothing but breaking down the public confidence in the ability of the G-men to solve crime and keep order and safety in the nation.

The C. I. O. closed its convention by electing Philip Murray to John L. Lewis' post, Lewis still carrying out his "step-down" promise of the presidential campaign. The C. I. O. then announced it would attempt to organize the Ford Motor plant, and in the same breath asked governmental investigation of any affiliations the company might have with Nazi interests.

DIPLOMATS: In and Out

Two diplomatic travels caught public attention: one returning from Europe to the United States, Lord Latham, and the other leaving the United States for France, new ambassador to Vichy, Retired Rear Admiral Leahy.

Leahy, taking Bullitt's post after it was reportedly offered to and declined by General Pershing, was said to have been sent to France with friendly words from the White House, and offers of American aid to the destitute in occupied France during the winter.

It was not clear how this country planned to get the lead to France in the face of Britain's final decision to continue a total food blockade, word of which was being brought back to this nation by Latham.

The British ambassador, after a visit to his homeland to check up on war progress and Britain's war needs, was to push the country for still stronger war aid.

Watchers figured that much of what Latham wants for his country will be unobtainable until congress is in position to extend huge credits to Britain.

As the ambassador asked for wider aid to Britain, President Roosevelt announced army's newest and biggest bombers were earmarked for Britain in a trade for airplane motors, also in process of manufacture.

These bombers, with 3,000-mile range fully loaded with tons of bombs, will be used at once in sharpening the attack on German objectives, British war leaders said.

NIPPON SPLIT: Japs Divided?

Wilfred Fleisher, American newspaper man, returned from Tokyo and once free of censorship, issued a report that Japan faces serious dissension at home, and predicted suicides, assassinations and revolutionary outbreaks in Nippon.

He saw little hope, however, that Japan will return to a moderate policy, saying the chief split is between two factions, both extremists. The moderates, the liberals, are in hiding and labelled "traitors," said Fleisher.

He reported the astounding spectacle of 17 men, on trial for plotting to assassinate Viscount Saito, walking out of the supreme court and issuing a statement that they refused to listen to the prosecutor's address because he had not first stated which political side he was on.

The two factions, he said, were these:

Imperialists, who want the emperor to retain his god-like status and to see Japan move forward to dominate surrounding lands.

Totalitarians, who hope that some leader will emerge to become a European-type dictator, to carry out similar empire aims.

Both sides, Fleisher said, were anxious for Japan to reach a non-aggression pact with Russia.

Future of the nation largely depends on the outcome of the European war, a Nazi victory practically meaning that Japan will become totalitarian while a victory for the British allies might result in chaos and collapse, Fleisher intimated.

DOMESTIC NEWS

Meat—Britain has ordered 30,000 tons of Argentine beef for December. Finland has set a ration of 1.7 ounces of beef per day per person.

Test—Mike Bureham, trying out the army's new 400-mile-an-hour Lockheed, said it was flying higher every day. He doesn't know how high it will go, but had suggested about 20,000 feet.

Coast—Guardians of the Unalaga passed lonely Deschenes island near Puerto Rico and saw a man waving a shirt. He was William P. O'Brien, of St. Louis, sole survivor of the wreck of a small boat. His two companions were dead.

Sol—Jubeller came to Milwaukee from Poland 25 years ago. In that period he has had seven automobile accidents, one of them fatal to a seven-year-old boy, also was convicted of burglary. He was sent to jail and his driving license revoked.

Generals Richardson and Swift, cavalry leaders at El Paso, Texas, were held over their demonstration that horses beat scout cars. American mechanized army experts "raced" cavalry units and were left behind in three minutes in difficult terrain.

TWO MORE: Destroyers

CHARLES EDISON
An honor for his father.

Down at Kearney, N. J., they launched two more destroyers for Uncle Sam's navy. The two new ones were called the Edison and the Ericsson, names that dovetailed nicely. The pair were named after Thomas Alva Edison, the greatest of inventors, and John Ericsson, who invented the famous Monitor warship in the Civil war. The Monitor, it will be remembered, defeated the Merrimack in the first battle between ironclads in the history of the world.

Tom Edison's son, Charles, is governor-elect of New Jersey. His mother sponsored the Edison destroyer. A great-grand-niece of old Ericsson sponsored the sister ship, Mrs. Ruth Wallgren. The architect of the Monitor was born in Sweden, where they haven't yet forgotten him.

French

These were two of the new American destroyers. England had obtained some 50 of the old ones, and was asking for more, like Oliver Twist. Meanwhile, France still had 50-60 destroyers, and also 50-60 submarines, and big ones at that. But one French battleship was out of the picture.

It was reported from Madrid that a big 22,000 tonner of the Paris class was sitting at Gibraltar. Over this Frenchman flew the white naval ensign of the British fleet, and on board there was a crew of typical Limes. Just how it got there, under foreign control, nobody seemed quite to know, but everybody admitted this Paris class-mate was a valuable sea prize.

OVERSEAS BITS

Mail—Lisbon air mail shipments were resumed, first flight carrying 3,000 pounds, a lot of letters.

Home—Stay home for Christmas is the German slogan this year, people being told that railroads will be needed for war purposes, and not for travel.

Surrender—Unconfirmed reports were that a first-line French battleship had surrendered to the British at Gibraltar.

Americank—A veteran of the Argonne battle of American troops in France, seeing the Greek-Italian Pindus mountain fight, said the Greeks fought like the Yanks, from rock to rock and tree to tree.

Classes—W. L. White wrote from London that he couldn't understand Kennedy's statement that democracy was dead in England. He said all classes mix on equal footing when the bombs fall.

Clothing—One American correspondent in London said that while America is busy sending ambulances, what the British really need is warm clothing.

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY NEWS

JACKSON-SILVER UNIT No. 68

The card party for the benefit of the Auxiliary, held at the home of Bertha Kimball Friday evening, was well attended, there being five tables. The Unit members are grateful to the community for this fine crowd. Special refreshments were served by the hostess.

Several Post members were present at the Brigade meeting in West Paris Tuesday evening to hear Fred Rowell and also the special town meeting in South Paris Saturday. The town will provide a suitable place for the guard volunteers to drill in West Paris. Over fifty have signed up at present.

The District Council meeting will be in Lewiston Saturday, Dec. 14, at 2 p. m. with distinguished guests present.

The next regular meetings are Dec. 8. Refreshments and social get-together after the business session.

Christmas gifts from the American Legion Auxiliary will go to every disabled World War veteran who is forced to spend Christmas in a hospital and there are approximately 10,000 of them. In addition, the Auxiliary will give gifts to the families of many thousands of the men, left in need at home by the illness of the veteran. This vast program of Christmas giving is an annual part of the Auxiliary Rehabilitation activities. Last year more than $230,000 was expended.

Also, the Auxiliary, in a number of states, including Maine, is making it possible for the veterans to send gifts to their children, tagged "from Daddy."

The American Legion and its Auxiliary are hourly faced with the problems of the men and their families who are still suffering from the many horrors of war and yet, the public will say, and we like to believe, unthinkingly, that the American Legion advocates war. It is NOT so! The forming of these home defense units, called Brigades, are for the benefit of all. Bear in mind, if another war comes, everybody, rich and poor, young and old, will be in it. Allike Bombs make no distinction of persons!

"There is a destiny that makes us brothers; None goes his way alone. All that we send into the lives of others Comes back into our own." — Markham

The third of a series of white parties was held at the Legion Rooms Wednesday evening, Dec. 4.
